Street Dulls LDK Solar's Shine

Carl Gutierrez, 11.19.08, 04:00 PM EST

Investors dismissed the China-based company's positive outlook, sending its shares down.

On Wednesday, China-based solar energy firm LDK Solar (nyse: LDK - news - people) announced its third-quarter earnings beat expectations due to rising demand. It also offered a rosy outlook.

Analysts, unpersuaded, pulled the solar wafer maker down 10.9%, or $1.62, to $13.27, in late-afternoon trading. "In general, investors don't believe the guidance," said Sam Dubinsky, an analyst at Oppenheimer.

"They painted a very rosy picture in an industry that's going through an adjustment right now,"

Dubinsky said. "If you just look at the solar sector in general, major companies have had some pretty horrific forecasts."

For the fourth quarter, China-based LDK Solar anticipates revenue of $555.0 million to $565.0 million, and expects fiscal 2009 sales of $2.9 billion to $3.1 billion. Wall Street, on the other hand, expects sales of $513.0 million in the fourth quarter, and $2.6 billion for the year.

LDK has tried to stay positive and increase investors' confidence in the solar sector, or at least in its own stock. (See "LDK's Bullish On Solar.")

For example, last week JA Solar (nasdaq: JASO - news - people) sent a chill through the temperamental industry. (See "JA Solar's Double Credit Crunch.") The solar-cell maker, also based in China, posted strong quarterly results but delivered a warning of waning global demand, leading it to cut its outlook.

Seeing a confidence problem, LDK came out the following day announcing its wafer plant is operating at capacity, contracts for 2009 exceed output for the year and available cash and credit on hand total more than $1.0 billion.

In any event, LDK is facing more long-term problems. Philip Miller, an analyst at Strategic International Securities Research, expects substantial growth in the industry, driven by the incoming administration of President-elect Barack Obama responding to the domestic needs of the U.S.

Miller is concerned, however, that Chinese companies will fall behind the curve, as the strongest avenues of growth will be paved by technological development in America.
